

THE LONE VINE

Guglielmo Bertetta

As the end of the growing season nears the vine displays its fall colors and a bounty of rich fruit. The pickers are advancing toward this row's last vine. The fruit of this ancient Zinfandel vine is minutes away from harvest. The warm days and cooling coastal fog of the Santa Rosa region produces some of the exceptional grapes of the Sonoma valley. The October chill has turned the vibrant green leaves into their autumn splendor. This eighty year old vine will soon enter the growing cycle of the next year and be productive for years to come.
